

Hera Saud

Hera Saud is a sociologist. She has an interest in designing software for community development, photography, sculpture, and education. She has done specialization in IT support under Google. She reads literature, philosophy, ecology, and social sciences. Her areas of interest are in ‘understanding the role of forgiveness in social life’, the interface of human and non-human nature, the relationship between self and wholeness, and current affairs.

She is currently working on ‘seeking forgiveness from mother nature’. She is exploring the possibilities of translating some parts of the nature of order into Urdu.

Her other ongoing projects are Ethnographies of Transformative Reconciliation: In Pursuit of Happiness (tentative title), Primitive Accumulation through Regrets, Apologies, and Illiteracy (tentative title), and Exhaustion (tentative title).

Hera has worked as a part of a team researching identity politics. She is willing to learn, work with people, take initiative for problem-solving, and is open to acquiring new skills for building community.
